MEDICAL.

The First Symptoms of Death.

Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it to enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions, and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and cure the demon dyspepsia and install instead eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle by W. S. Lloyd, druggist.

A soft, low voice is a good thing in woman, but she ought not use a good thing too much.

Pronounced Hopeless.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally settled in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying, I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at W. S. Lloyd's drug store, regular size, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

A Dover, New Hampshire, man went to Florida last fall and took his pointer dog with him. About Jan. 1 the dog got homesick and started for home, arriving the 14th.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it, is that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never tried it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any throat, lung or chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at W. S. Lloyd's drug store.

What to Do With the Manure.

It used to be the manure heap or pile that was written about. It has largely gone. It should be discarded. In much of the drier soil of the West the manure can be applied at once to the pasture fields during summer, the meadow lands after haying and in early seasons. During wet periods when the tramping of the soil necessary in hauling out manure is to be avoided, have a covered place to throw it and have it packed down by the tramping of stock or other means. Never throw it outside, either in piles to heat or spread out to be washed away by rains. There is no necessity of throwing it outside where the rains make mud of it for stock to wade through. Don't for the sake of economy and cleanliness throw it out at the doors where man and beast have to wade through it to get into the stables. A stable for cows under observation has all the manure and refuse thrown out at the doors, and the accumulations from twenty cows remained there all the past winter and until September of this year. The location was such that the drainage of the valley after a rain largely flows over the yard, carrying much of the soluble portions down to a spring branch into a creek. This certainly indicates a large leak. A better way and one easily provided from waste lumber lying at the side of the barn in which the manure could be thrown when fields were wet and keep the yard about the doors clear of manure and as a consequence dry. But in the main save manure and time by getting into the habit of hauling at once to the fields when it is possible.

How Much They Felt.

Kind feelings are not worth much unless they lead to kind actions. People who are full of sympathy and benevolent wishes which never end in anything better than talk, will do well to read Mr. Hamilton's description of what he saw in Kaffir-land. It is an excellent sermon from the text, "Let us not love in word but in deed."

I had opportunities of seeing many acts of great kindness that these people do to each other; and as one instance out of many I will relate the following, which came under my notice:

A poor fellow had lost all his cows with lung sickness, and three of his wives died at the same time, I believe from eating the diseased meat. Unluckily, he had not planted many mealies, so that he was in a true state of bankruptcy.

A meeting of the heads of the kraals was called, and, after talking the matter over for some time, they all became silent and thoughtful, evidently considering what had better be done. Suddenly a man sprang up and exclaimed:

"I feel so many cows and calves for you!" then another got up and said: "how many heads, a third had a like sensation, and then a fourth, and so on through the august assembly, until the man was again possessed of a very respectable herd."

Working By Contract.

An English traveler in Kashmir makes some surprising statements as to the amount of work which the natives perform, on what would seem to us an altogether insufficient diet. When the labor is forced, and there is only a fixed daily pittance for it, the Kashmiris will not do much more than the weakest coolie.

But a great number of Kashmiri cultivators occupy themselves in spring and autumn in taking goods from the plains to Kashmir by contract, and on that bargain will exert themselves manfully.

I once arranged my load for the ordinary coolies, but afterwards met with some Kashmiris who were ready to take them by weight. They loaded themselves each with three of the loads that had been made up; one man carried four dozen of beer packed in cases; another load weighed one hundred and ninety-two pounds; and I have a well-authenticated case of a young man carrying two hundred and forty pounds.

This was not for a short journey, but for more than a hundred miles of uneven road, with many long rises and several passes, one of them over nine thousand feet. In doing such feats as this the Kashmiris take their own time; the ten days' march they spend eighteen or nineteen days upon; but they do it all on a diet of unleavened bread or of rice.

Mistress (during a heated term)—Got dinner to-day on the gasoline stove, Bridget. Bridget—Paze, mum, I did try, but th' stove went out. Mistress—Try again, then. Bridget—Yis, mum, but it's not come back yit. It went out through th' roof.—[New York Weekly.

Speed of Insects.

"Flies," observes a writer in the London Spectator, "frequent the insides of our windows, buzzing sluggishly in and out of the room. But what different creatures are they when they accompany your horse on a hot summer's day! A swarm of these little pests keep pertinaciously on wing about your horse's ears; quicken the pace up to ten or twelve miles an hour, still they are there; let a gust wind arise and carry them backward and behind, the breeze having dropped, their speed is redoubled, and they return to their post of annoyance to the poor horse. But this example gives only a partial proof of the fly's power of flight. The present writer was traveling one day in autumn by rail at about twenty-five miles an hour, when a company of flies in an appearance at the carriage-window. They never settled, but easily kept pace with the train; so much so, indeed, that their flight seemed to be almost mechanical, and the thought soon struck the writer that they had probably been drawn into a kind of vortex, whereby they were drawn onward with little exertion on the part of themselves. But this notion was soon disproved. They sallied forth at right angles from the carriage, flew to a distance of thirty or forty feet, still keeping pace, and then returned with increased speed and buoyancy to the window." The same writer estimates that the dragon-fly, which passes and repasses as in instantaneous jerks, is capable of flying at a speed of from eighty to a hundred miles an hour.

Sell your hogs when you can get the most money for them at the least outlay. The ups and downs of prices we cannot readily control, but by careful attention to feeding and the use of the scales we can tell closely whether we are making corn into pork at a profit or not. If not, there ought to be a change of ration or an immediate sale of marketable stock. It does not pay to hold beyond the time of profitable growth and fattening. Most successful feeders believe it pays best one year with another to sell the pork when the highest point in gain has been reached, letting the question of probable higher prices alone. Corn used in keeping over fattened hogs will make twice as much pork if given to other animals. It is a losing game to hold for an increase of price as a rule. Make all the pork you can out of your corn in just as little time as possible.—[Western Swineherd.

Among other practical questions answered at one of the State Farmers' Institutes was the one: "What is the best root for farmers to grow?" This was answered by Mr. Curtis, of Saratoga County, who said:

"The best root is the carrot, but the cheapest to produce is the turnip, and the progressive farmer must be his friend. Breeding sows can be wintered and do grandly on flat turnips and clover hay, nothing else. They will do better on other roots, but we can grow two crops on the same land on which the turnips are produced. For instance, one acre of good clover will furnish the hay for a score of hogs and the turnips also. People talk about a turnip flavor to milk and use milk with a manure flavor. There is too much senseless prejudice and notion about a great many things. Let us produce the foods which we can get the cheapest, and especially if they are healthful."

Eats Locks, Pins, Etc.

During the past forty-eight hours Oscar M. Spurrier, of Baltimore, with the assistance of Dr. Todd and several emetics was relieved of sixty-six different articles which he had swallowed while left alone in the sewing room. The articles are as follows:

Eighteen pins, four needles, eight tacks, seven wads of paper, two wads of muslin, eight china buttons, one vest button, four pearl buttons, one shoe button, one piece of bark, five corke, one piece of leather, one piece of match, one shank button, one brass pants button, two pieces of chips and one piece of wrapping cotton. The baby is resting easier, and it is hoped that the worst is over.

Mr. Willard, at a meeting of fruit growers, said that he had for some years been in the habit of cutting off from one-half to one-third of the season's growth from his plum trees during the mild weather in the winter when the wood was not frozen hard, and he was well satisfied that it was profitable. On varieties which make a long, rampant growth there is much breakage when the limbs are set full of fruit. By cutting back, short branches are forced out, which gives more fruiting surface and a stronger tree. He does not prune.

A Death Warning.

According to Dr. Chiappoli, an extraordinary opening of the eyelids, which gives the eyes the appearance of protruding from their orbits, is sometimes seen in patients who have apparently long to live, and this is an unfailing sign of death in 24 hours. In some cases only one eye is affected, but even then death is certain to take place within 72 hours. The effect is ascribed to a diseased state of the sympathetic nerve, but why it should always be a death symptom is not known.

Rooting grapevine branches, according to Popular Gardening, should be done in early spring. Dig a shallow trench into which the branch or stem is to be laid. Cover lightly to keep in place. When the buds start into growth, fill the soil back into the trench, and with each irrigation, each to produce a plant.

WIT AND WISDOM.

On a regular Plan—"How does Hen Peck take married life?" "Oh, I guess he takes it according to directions."

The man who dyes his whiskers couldn't find an easier way of telling people more about himself, without going to a great deal more expense.

Father—Do you make expenses in Chicago? Son—Do I? Well, I should say so. I make more expenses than you or I will ever be able to pay. —[Light.

"He shouldn't say shoulder arms to those cavalrymen." "Why not?" "They have nothing but swords. He ought to say shoulder blades."—[New York Sun.

"Did you go to the watercolor exhibition, Mrs. Spriggins?" "Yes; and it was ridiculous. I never saw no water the color of them there paintings."—[Harper's Bazar.

Tax Payer (shivering)—I can't afford to buy sufficient underclothing at McKinley prices and I'm all in a chill. Great Statesman—Oh, a chill, eh? Well, there's no duty on quinine. —[Epoch.

Where the foolishness comes in. "I think these type writer jokes are awfully foolish." "They are for a fact. My wife comes to the office once a week ever since the papers began printing them."

"Is there a stationery store in town?" asked a visitor in a Kansas hotel.

"No, sir," replied the clerk, as he shook his head; "this town is in the cyclone belt."

Chalkerly—Ah, sir, that dinner coat I built for you was an inspiration! I was in rapport with the subject when I made it. Imagined myself at dinner! Cautious—Yes, it fits me as though it was cut with a knife and fork.—[Clothes and Furnishers.
